TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS/TERMS OF REFERENCE

1. INTRODUCTION TO KPSDP

When economies go after indiscriminate market-based growth and the people go after a consumerist culture, the apparent side effect is ‘unmanageable waste generation’. There was a time that this was considered as a phenomenon of the west; and later of the cities of the fast emerging economies; and currently it is everywhere including the villages. The villages in general and those on the periphery of cities and towns in particular are at the frontline as far as indiscriminate and unmanageable waste collection and transportation is concerned.

Solid and Liquid Waste Management is one of the key components of “Rural Sanitation and Solid Waste Management Program” launched with the objective of bringing improvement in cleanliness, hygiene and the general quality of life in rural areas. In rural areas, examples of solid waste include wastes from kitchens, gardens, cattle sheds, agriculture, and materials such as metal, paper, plastic, cloth, and so on. They are organic and inorganic materials with no remaining economic value to the owner produced by homes, commercial and industrial establishments. Despite the fact that there are many policies being formulated for protection of environment from solid waste but these policies are only implemented in cities. In rural areas mostly open dumping is done. But as rural population is also expanding in size, it has become inevitable that a proper waste management system is also extended to villages.

Government of Punjab has established Waste Management Companies (WMCs) in 7 large cities of the Punjab to serve in the Urban Areas. Solid Waste Management services delivery in these cities have considerably been improved over the last few years. However, small and medium sized cities are still performing at 40-60% efficiency due to archaic model of SWM and deficiency of professionals SWM engineers to properly plan and manage the SWM on modern grounds. Waste being collected by the municipal corporations/committees is being relocated and dumped in outskirts of the cities usually along main road, along railway tracks, canals and trenches located in vicinity of the cities. This implies the dirty look of the cities as well as public and environmental hazards due to open dumping of the waste. Furthermore, Collection of solid waste is usually confined to the city centers and high income neighborhoods, and even there the service is usually irregular. The urban poor - often residing in informal settlements with little or no access to solid waste collection and often in areas that are contiguous with open dumps - are particularly vulnerable.

“Sanitation and street cleaning’ is one of the basic functions of LGs and they should make arrangements for attending to it. The concern is that at the end of the day, all the garbage falls on the lap of the Local Governments to clean it up. The Government Punjab as well as many Local governments are looking to come up with a working system to manage solid waste in rural areas.

Recently, Government of the Punjab has proposed a program for rural Punjab entitled “Khadim-e-Punjab Saaf Dehaat Program” to uplift the dilapidated situation of waste management and sanitation in villages. The scope of the programme is as follows:

- a) Cleaning and de-silting of drains in streets of Villages
- b) Sweeping and cleaning of streets of villages
- c) Lifting of solid waste / heaps of garbage from the streets in the Villages and depositing at the designated points in villages called “Waste Collection Points (WCPs)”
- d) Lifting waste from WCPs, transportation and dumping off solid waste to the designated dumping sites

The specific objectives of proposed project is to develop the municipal solid waste collection, transportation and disposal system from villages in each UC. The general objectives of this project are:

- Improvement of sanitation situation in line with the sustainable development goals
- Improving public health conditions through minimizing the negative impacts associated with inappropriate waste management practices in rural areas
- Reducing environmental impacts with appropriate management of rural solid waste through selecting best suitable technology for collection, transportation and disposal;
- Enhance community relation by demonstrating a commitment to environment protection; and
- Involvement of private sector in primary and secondary waste transportation

The objective of the program are in line with Sectoral objectives of Local Government & Community Development Department. Sanitation and street cleaning is one of the basic functions of LGs and they will make arrangements for handling it. The Government Punjab as well as many Local governments are looking to come up with a working system to improve sanitation of rural areas of the province. The project is expected to be implemented in 3218 Rural Union Councils including 40 Union Councils of Urban Characteristics of Punjab covering approx. 26,000 Rural Settlements with major focus on settlements with population greater than 1,000 population.

The project has been proposed for the improvement/introduction of sanitation system in the rural areas. Such an investment has never been started before. Previously, all projects were initiated in urban localities. Due to need based activities the probability of the project sustainability is very high. Till today, a very good response has been received from local management of District Councils.

Solid Waste Management (hereinafter referred to as “SWM”) has become a serious problem in Punjab due to lack of resources, institutional weaknesses and lack of civic sense towards solid waste disposal. The average solid waste collection efficiency in Punjab is only around 50% in cities and non-existent in rural areas of Punjab, causing spread of multiple diseases such as diarrhea and dengue fever. Whatever quantity of waste collected is, normally seen as waste dumped in open areas along the roadside, canal bank and low lying areas. Soil contamination is affecting the quality of groundwater from shallow depth. Un-collected waste is illegally piled on sidewalks, in open spaces, sewer lines, or even in canals, and blockage of wastewater flow in the sewers are seen, causing additional problem by the local government. The relationship between solid waste management and diseases has been well known broadly from the public health point of view.

Approximately 70 million people are residing in rural areas of Punjab generating approximately 20,000 tons per day of municipal waste. So far rural Punjab has been neglected and no formal system of SWM ever existed. This waste ends up in drains, canals, agriculture land or remain there in the form of heaps inside and in vicinity of every village. Formal waste management system had never existed in Rural areas of the Punjab, even 182 small to intermediate cities does not have engineered and properly managed solid waste management system and 40-50% of the generated waste; collected through limited resources end up along the main roads and freshwater bodies. This gives a bad look of the cities and villages.

In rural areas broadly two types of waste is generated and it is classified as organic Waste (Cow dung + Agriculture Waste) and inorganic waste (daily household waste). The Organic waste will not be handled under KPSDP, however it will be segregated and utilized by local residents. While Inorganic waste (Municipal Waste) will be managed under KPSDP.

The project will enable LGs to start delivering their basic function of providing sanitation services as per the Local Government Act 2013. Broadly project has been divided into 3 Components:

Basic Functions: Providing LGs with resources for execution of services related to i) waste collection from households/streets ii) manual sweeping in streets iii) drains cleaning and de-silting. Important design parameters under component -1 are as under

v)Waste Segregation and management of the Cow Dung	Household will be responsible to segregate the domestic waste from the animal dung at household level and will be responsible for handling and management of the cow dung at their own.
